

Being Prepared For The Day

Surviving A Deadly Force Encounter

Being in an Officer-involved shooting or critical incident produces uncertainties, stress and fears of what will happen next. Undue anxiety can develop within both personal and professional relationships and effect job performance and home life. This class is for the officer who wants to better understand the dynamics of a deadly force shooting and to prepare themselves for The Day.

Being Prepared For The Day offers an in-depth analysis of what occurs during and after an officer-involved shooting along with information to better prepare you before the incident can happen.

This class utilizes personal interviews with more than forty officers who have used deadly force or were partner officers, their spouses and significant others, criminal investigators, prosecutors, police administrators, defense attorneys, medical professionals, law enforcement trainers and media persons.

Eddy Summers is a 32-year veteran of law enforcement. Following his retirement from the Greensboro, North Carolina Police Department in 2013, he continues to serve as a reserve officer. While working full-time, Eddy spent nearly 24 years assigned to the Department's Canine Unit as a handler, trainer and corporal and he served 19 years with the Special Response Team. Eddy continues to serve as an instructor in law enforcement academies and community colleges. Additionally, Eddy served for 8 years as the president of the Greensboro Police Officers Association.
